

What is Supportive Care?

The aim of supportive care is to help patients and their families/carers cope with cancer and its treatment from pre-diagnosis, diagnosis, treatment, cure, continuing illness, death and into bereavement.

The aim of supportive care is to help patients and their families/carers cope with cancer and its treatment from pre-diagnosis, diagnosis, treatment, cure, continuing illness, death and into bereavement.

Supportive care is important as it helps patients live life as well as possible with the physical and/or psychological effects of cancer and its treatments.

- Back to index